Sarasota Plastic Surgery has built an enviable reputation over the past 35 years for delivering aesthetically pleasing results with a focus on patient care and satisfaction. Its four plastic surgeons have a combined clinical experience of almost 80 years and a track record of delivering natural looking results for cosmetic procedures of the face, breast and body. "We are always motivated when we see patients who are clearly delighted by the results they see," says Dr. Braun Graham. "We can help patients boost confidence whether it's a face lift, breast augmentation, tummy tuck or any of the many other procedures we've performed over the years."

Regardless what procedure a patient needs, each doctor works within high professional standards. "There are a lot of trendy things that come up all the time," says Dr. James Schmidt. "While we use many new techniques, we use only 'gold standard' cosmetic procedures. These are the best surgical procedures, which have been researched thoroughly, tested, and shown to deliver the best results." The focus within the practice is on achieving results that look natural. "An overdone procedure is immediately noticeable, and that's not the desired outcome," according to Dr. David Mobley. "We don't want the first thing people to notice is that our patients have had work done. We want them to notice that our patients look vital, energetic, and refreshed."

Safety, of course, is the top priority and Sarasota Plastic Surgery has a modern surgical center that is state-licensed and federally certified. "You hear about so-called medical tourism where people leave the country to have their procedures done. We see a lot of those who come back needing revisions," says Dr. Scott Engel. "We have worked hard to create an excellent track record here. Our goal is performing safe, reliable procedures that leave people feeling absolutely wonderful about themselves."
